Description: Fremmet was a human commander in the Neo-Imperial forces of the warlord Barro. During or after 11 ABY, the mercenary Din Djarin and his son Din Grogu hunted down Barro for the New Republic, forcing the warlord to flee in a trio of All Terrain Armored Transports. Fremmet commanded one of the walkers as they moved along a narrow mountain pass on the ice planet where Barro was based, but Djarin caught up to them. The mercenary boarded Fremmet's walker and dispatched all the cold weather assault troopers on board before breaching the cockpit hatch and causing an explosion that killed Fremmet.

Biography

Incoming Mando

Fremmet was a human who served as a commander in a group of Neo-Imperial forces led by warlord Barro during the reign of the New Republic. Barro was based out of an Imperial base on an ice planet from which he claimed tribute from the local prefects. During or after 11 ABY, the Mandalorian mercenary Din Djarin and his adoptive son, Din Grogu, hunted down Barro for the New Republic. Djarin was able to defeat the Imperial forces stationed in the base, causing Barro to flee in a trio of All Terrain Armored Transports along a narrow mountain path.

Fremmet acted as the the vehicle commander of the second walker from its cockpit, communicating with Barro in the lead walker via comms. As they progressed, Djarin and Grogu rode a stolen All Terrain Reconnaissance Transport down the mountainside in front of them and then charged at the Imperial forces. Evading fire from Barro's walker, Djarin and Grogu dashed underneath the vehicle, which the warlord reported to Fremmet. The commander then had their walker open fire but also failed to take down the attackers. The mercenary and child then reached the third walker and destroyed it with explosives before using a jetpack to fly onto the exterior of Fremmet's walker.

Something's on the roof

After Fremmet reported the loss of the walker to Barro, the warlord ordered the commander to send all their forces to fight the mercenary. As alarms sounded and all of the cold weather assault troopers in Fremmet's walker began to prepare for combat, Djarin cut through the rear door of the vehicle's hold and then dispatched all of the troopers inside, also shooting one of the two pilots in the cockpit with Fremmet before it could be sealed off from the hold. Fremmet stood in silence, breathing heavily and staring at the sealed hatch as Barro demanded an update, wanting to know if Fremmet's men had killed the mercenary.

The commander only responded upon hearing the Mandalorian moving across the roof of the walker's cockpit, desperately demanding that Barro's walker shoot the mercenary off. The warlord ordered his walker's two pilots onto the roof to fire on Djarin, but it was too late, as the mercenary began breaching the roof entry hatch above Fremmet. The commander cried out to Barro ineffectually over comms before the entire head of Fremmet's walker exploded, killing the commander. Djarin then killed Barro and the remaining Imperials as well.

Personality and traits

Fremmet became increasingly panicked as the Mandalorian dispatched the other Imperials. The commander had light skin, gray eyes, and a graying beard.

Equipment

While commanding the All Terrain Armored Transport, Fremmet wore Imperial officer battle armor, including a white chestplate, pauldrons and helmet with black goggles and white belt over a gray Imperial officer's uniform. The commander had a black blaster pistol, an SE-14r light repeating blaster, in a belt holster.
