Description: Mira was a female Zabrak who was married to former Jedi Master Eeth Koth.

Biography

At some point, Mira met the former Jedi Master Eeth Koth and married him. However, she was unaware of Koth's past as a Jedi and did not even know his real name was "Eeth Koth." Eventually, she gave birth to a daughter years after Order 66, an order that saw most of Koth's Jedi companions killed. Mere moments after their child's birth, Darth Vader and his Inquisitorius confronted Koth. Mira was surprised and, from Vader, heard Koth's real name for the first time, discovering in those moments that he had been a Jedi. Urged by Koth to flee while he tried to bargain with the unmoved Vader, she told the nurse droid to give her the baby despite it saying that she should rest.

While Mira attempted to flee with her newborn child, Koth and Vader engaged each other in a lightsaber duel. Nearly making it to her father's hovercraft, Mira was stopped on the docks by the Thirteenth Sister. Appealing to the Inquisitor's shared womanhood, Mira was permitted to board the craft with her daughter and believe they had escaped. As the craft departed the docks, the Inquisitor used the Force to rip the child from Mira's arms as the craft was mid-flight; robbing the new mother of her daughter and her trust of others. Mira begged her father to go back, but consoling her, he said that they still had hope that the baby was alive because they did not kill her, which means that they wanted her, and that one day they might meet her again. Mira then asked what they wanted her for. They both fled the world, leaving her husband to die and her daughter to be abducted as part of Project Harvester due to her being Force-sensitive like her father.

Personality and traits

Mira cared deeply for her baby, as she begged the Inquisitor to not take her baby and also when she cried for it. Mira had black hair, light brown eyes, and light tan skin.
