Description: Don-Wan Kihotay, born Hess Korrin, was a Force-sensitive male Human who served as a librarian on Obroa-skai. A fanatic of the extinct Jedi Order, Korrin fantasized about being a Jedi Knight, as he had much spare time to read their lore and history. When the Imperial Security Bureau shut down Korrin's antiquities wing on Obroa-skai, the man snapped, and became "Don-Wan Kihotay," a lightsaber-wielding warrior who genuinely believed that he was a Jedi.

He escaped the notice of the ISB, and found himself on Aduba-3, where he was a source of amusement for the local spacers. Kihotay later joined the Star-Hoppers of Aduba-3, a ragtag team assembled by Captain Han Solo to defend the township of Onacra from the Cloud-Riders of Serji-X Arrogantus. Kihotay participated in the defense of the town and even did battle with a gargantuan Sithspawn. He later passed away on Telos IV, in a medical station when it fell under attack from the bounty hunter Beilert Valance.

Personality and traits

Kihotay, or Korrin, was obsessed with the tales of the Jedi—their life, culture, and purpose—and became an expert on the order. So thorough was his obsession that he began to fantasize about being a Jedi himself, so much so that his hold on what was real and what was fictional slipped. When the ISB destroyed his antiquities wing, Korrin slipped totally into his fantasy Kihotay persona, never to return to his original personality. He fully believed that he was a Jedi Knight, and saw it as his duty to uphold their ideals. As such, he swore to uphold the Republic and defend the innocent against the unjust. He felt that if he were to not do so, he would be unfit to bear the title of Jedi Knight. It was his belief, and that of those around him, that he was the last of the Jedi. His sense of chivalry and righteousness was offended when the voluptuous Amaiza Foxtrain was manhandled by a brute, and Kihotay was roused into action as a result. Kihotay also saw it as his mission to destroy the emergent Behemoth from the World Below, and felt that he was above mercenaries such as Han Solo. When Solo wielded Kihotay's lightsaber, the old man protested, and saw the act as blasphemy against the holy ritual of the Jedi.

Powers and abilities

A Force-sensitive, Kihotay possessed a particularly low midi-chlorian count nonetheless. Had it been higher, he would have likely joined the Jedi Order he so revered, and would likely have been exterminated along with them. He had the ability to perform mind tricks. Kihotay could also read and write Basic, Cerean, and Zabraki. In the heat of combat, Kihotay was able to put his lightsaber to use against high-hounds.
