Creatures D6 / Endorian chicken

Name: Endorian chicken
Designation: Non-sentient
Homeworld: Endor

Dexterity: 3D
Perception: 2D
Strength: 1D

Special Abilities
Egg laying: Endorian Chickens lay eggs which are easily harvested for food.

Move: 11
Size: 0.2 meters
Orneriness: 2D

Description: Endorian chickens, also known as tip-yip in Ewokese, were a species of birds that lived in the forests of Endor. These domesticated animals were kept by the Ewoks primarily as a source of food, and their meat was considered delicious.

Chickens were a species of non-sentient fowl hailing from Endor, a lush moon orbiting planet Tana. They had two thin legs with three clawed toes and an additional spur-like growth on the back of the foot. They also had puff crests of feathers, short wings and a feathered tail.

The sentient Ewoks, a race of diminutive aliens from Endor, kept these chickens for their meat, which was known offworld to be succulent—according to the Besalisk chef Dexter Jettster. During the final decade of the Galactic Republic, Jettster served the Endorian chicken pot pie and fried Endorian chicken at Dex's Diner, his restaurant located in CoCo Town, Coruscant.

The Imperial All Terrain Scout Transport walker was nicknamed "chicken walker" after the creature. The Ewokese name for the species was "tip-yip."

Stats by FreddyB, descriptive text from WookieePedia
Image copyright LucasArts.
Any complaints, writs for copyright abuse, etc should be addressed to the Webmaster FreddyB.