

Droids D6 / Cinnagar foundries Krath war droid

Name: Cinnagar foundries Krath war droid
Manufacturer: Cinnagar foundries
Class: Battle droid
Degree: Fourth-degree droid
Height: 1.8 meters
Sensor color: Black

Dexterity: 2D

Blaster 4D, Brawling Parry 4D, Dodge 4D, Melee

Weapons 4D, Melee Parry 4D

Knowledge: 1D

Intimidate 2D

Mechanical: 1D

Perception: 2D

Search 2D

Strength: 4D

Brawling 4D

Technical: 1D

Equipped with:

Humanoid Body (two arms, two legs, head)

Two visual and two auditory sensors - human range

Limited Intelligence Brain

Ablative plating (+1D vs damage)

Pulse-wave bow (5D)

Melee combat short sword (Str+1D)

Move: 10

Description: The Krath war droid was a powerful battle droid series created by the Krath, an organization of darksiders founded by the corrupt nobles of the Empress Teta system in 4000 BBY.

Description

Though Krath war droids were humanoid in appearance, they could hunch down like animals and race at amazing speeds towards their targets, thanks to their gyro-balanced assembly systems. These droids were designed to surprise and overwhelm their enemies in devastating and deadly shock assaults. Despite being easy to manufacture, Krath war droids had limited cognitive matrices and were programmed only to seek and destroy the greatest threat on the battlefield. Krath war droids were thus often deployed in large numbers in order to overwhelm the enemy. Systemically identifying the greatest threat in range, the droids would swarm until the target was eliminated before moving on to the next most dangerous target.

They were armed with a melee combat short sword for hacking at close range and a Pulse-wave bow for long-range engagements. The attenuated induction spines on this weapon generated a pulse-wave charge and in a pinch could also be used as spear-like skewering/thrusting tools.

History

Following the Jedi/Galactic Republic defeat at the Battle of Koros Major in 3997 BBY, the Jedi held a great assembly of ten thousand Jedi Masters and Jedi Knights on the planet Deneba. The Krath saw this as an opportunity to test this new battle droid and to attack their enemies.

Their agents sabotaged the programming of the servant droids that would be at the convocation. The Krath then loaded a Tetan Corsair with a hundred modified life pods, which each carried a single war droid. Halfway into the Jedi assembly, the sabotaged servant droids suddenly attacked their Jedi owners, causing much confusion and chaos. Meanwhile in orbit, the Tetan Corsair launched its life pods and an army of war droids emerged from the impact craters.

With the element of surprise on their side, the war droids charged at the assembled Jedi at frightening speeds and fired their pulse-wave firing assemblies. Soon, many Jedi fell to these mindless automatons. Jedi Master Arca Jeth fought back against them by using a Force technique he had discovered during the Great Droid Revolution to short-circuit them. However, he eventually fell to a plasma barrage. Though the Jedi had survived the assault, the death toll was appalling. Soon the Galactic Republic and the Jedi succeeded in defeating the Krath along with their Sith and Mandalorian allies.

The Krath war droid later resurfaced in galactic history as the reference for the droid frame that would hold the biological remains of Qymaen jai Sheelal, allowing him to become the feared General Grievous. Grievous's IG-100 MagnaGuard droid elite were similarly modeled on the Krath war droid.

Grievous's Krath shell would also be reused in the N-K Project during the Galactic Civil War.

Stats by FreddyB, Descriptive Text from WookieePedia.

Image copyright LucasArts.

Any complaints, writs for copyright abuse, etc should be addressed to the Webmaster FreddyB.